DJ Grammafone Jo Lazzarani is the vivacious grand-dame of clubbing, injecting the scene with a much needed shot of glamour, attitude and mature sophistication through her DJ Grammafone alter-ego. At 69 years old, and as a retired grandmother she might not be the type of person you'd expect to see holding court from the DJ booths of some of the hottest clubs and parties. And that's completely understandable. At a time of the night when most of her contemporaries will be well 'settled down', Jo's evening is only just beginning.

That Drummer That DJ are a dynamic and energetic live concept rocking venues throughout the UK and beyond. On one side of the stage, manning the Technics is DJ Big Al, a renowned and respected turntablist in his own right who's opened up for several arena-sized acts including Snoop Dogg, Mark Ronson and Nelly Furtado as well as holding down residencies and guest spots in the UK, Europe, Asia and the US. Playing opposite is Ryan Hassan, without question one of the country's most talented and hard working drummers who combines technical ability with an understanding of what it takes to be an entertainer behind a drum kit. Together they de-construct, re-edit and remix massive dance floor fillers live and on the fly in an uproarious stage show.

Headphone Disco are the biggest 'silent party' people around performing their unique 'TwoDeejaySuperShow' to enthusiastic crowds around the world. Each show involves arming clubbers with their own set of wireless two-channel headphones, switching off the sound-system and having two DJs spin two completely different sets side by side from Headphone Disco's visually enhanced stage set-up. Two DJs. Two styles of music. Both at the same time. So how does it work? Headphone Discos' DJs rock the party mashing up two channels of tunes with the option of live video. The crowd select their DJ of choice via a switch on their headphones and get busy on the dance floor. If you've not booked Headphone Disco before give us a call!
